SUSPECTS KNOWLEDGE MYSTERY

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 28.—The Grand Jury of Providence County will take up the Knowles murder case today, unless present indication fail. A report on the murder of Dr. C. Franklin Moore was expected about 11 o'clock.

With that case reported upon, the mystery surrounding the assassination of Judge Willis R. Knowles of Johnston on Labor Day was scheduled as next in line for the consideration of the grand jurors.

Sheriff Andrew J. Wilson of Providence County, who is now the head investigator on the Knowles murder trail, hints that he is nearer to solving it than at any time since the Judge was shot.

DEFINITE LINE

A new turn in the investigation discloses two suspects. A previous hint had been given of a plot against the Judge, meaning that more than one person might be involved. But now the Sheriff and his associates are working along more definite line than has hitherto been revealed.

The Sheriff, with Chief Inspector William F. O'Neil and Inspectors Albert and Douglas of the city police, has been in frequent conference with Attorney-General Herbert A. Rice.

This points to the Grand Jury coming into the case. The Sheriff has confined most of his work the past few days to the towns of Johnston and Belvidere. Judge Willis lived in the former community. It is understood that many residents of these places, particularly of Johnston, will be called before the Grand Jury.

PRISON FROM REVEALED

It has finally been determined that the bullet taken from Judge Knowles' body—one of two fired at him—was from a revolver.

The time of the murder is now set at between 7:30 and 7:45 on Labor Day morning and not at 7:50, as originally believed.

This is based on the telephone alarm sent in by Mrs. Cora E. Ward, wife of the Judge's business manager. Call records from the telephone company have corrected the time.

Indoor Life Makes Fat

TAKE OIL OF KOREAN TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN, OR TO REDUCE SUPERFLUOUS FAT.

People who are confined within doors and who are deprived of the fresh air and exercise must take precaution to guard against overweight, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body. Lack of exercise in the fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, so that it is unable to produce energy, muscle and the formation of unsightly and unhealthy fat in the body. The small weight you are daily carrying of your excess fat is the cause of lowering your vitality by carrying your excess burden. Do not be misled by the fact that you are not tired and satisfied in your mind that there is too stout should go to a good diet and get a box of oil of Korean capsules, and take one or two before retiring at night. Soon a few days' treatment will show a noticeable reduction in weight. Digestion should improve, muscles less lumpy in appearance, and the oil of Korean will help the digestion and is designed to reduce the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. Any person who wishes to reduce their weight 15 or 20 pounds should give this treatment a trial. There is nothing better.

SPURNED BY HER LITTLE GIRL IN COURT

Judge Braley and a courtroom full of spectators found their eyes growing misty in spite of themselves today when Mrs. Phyllis Gesser of No. 10 Spencer avenue, Chelsea, appeared to the court to restore to her five-year-old daughter, Margaret, who has been in the custody of Mrs. Emory Dooley of West Medford, Friday, when she was turned over to Sheriff Quinn.

The case was to have opened yesterday afternoon, but Judge Braley was at Nantucket and because of the storm was unable to come ashore in time. He opened court at 10 o'clock.

Sheriff Quinn brought in the little girl. She wore a red coat with green collar and cuffs and a soft hat. As soon as she saw the crowded courtroom she was frightened and began to cry.

Judge Braley said to the mother: "You may take the child and comfort her."

MOTHER IS SPURNED.
As Mrs. Gesser went to pick up the little girl, the baby screamed:

"No, no. I want to go with Mrs. Dooley."

The mother took her into an ante room. When she was there, she called to the witness stand, and under questioning by Judge Braley told this story:

"I am married and live with my husband on our farm in West Medford. This little baby's mother was in prison for drunkenness, and her children were starving. I took the baby from a home for a few weeks' vacation. When I brought it back, the sisters pleaded with the mother to let them have the child."

"I took Margaret home for three days more. Then she went home for her husband. She gave me Margaret. She said she didn't want anything to do with any of her children."

"I later took the baby back. She was drunk. Police officers were there."

"I have had the baby for the last four weeks, and she has been with me for two and a half years. I lost my child. I have no children. I lost my child."

"My husband has steady employment. I want to keep the little girl," she cried. "I can see the child is attached to you."

HEARS CHILD'S STORY.

He then asked Sheriff Quinn: "Do you know Dooley?"

"Yes," said the sheriff. "He is a very bad man. This is a very much traveled to and from the stadium per hire automobile, with the Athletic Association paying the bill. The bill in the course of a season, amounted pretty regularly to the $2,000 mark."

The association took thought on that $2,000, and finally had an inspiration. They put $500 into a driver, eliminated the hire of a car and the pay of a chauffeur, and now calculate on having at least $2,500 a year.

Autos Collide.
An automobile owned by the Dana Clothing Company of Washington street, collided with an auto-truck owned by the Starline Restaurant Company at the corner of Broad and Tremont streets today. Both machines were slightly damaged. No one was hurt.

"Mrs. Dooley gave me $50 for the baby, but I didn't know what I was doing when I signed a paper."

"A man came with my husband when he was drunk and took the little girl away."

"I don't drink now, and I want my baby."

Walsh Boomed for President

Mayor Good of Cambridge launched a presidential boom for Governor Walsh in speaking before the St. Mary's Catholic Association at St. Mary's Hall, Cambridge. He predicted that in 1920 Massachusetts would offer as a candidate for the head of the nation her United States Senator and former chief executive.

FIND 45 BODIES F-4 DEAD BURIED OKLAHOMA DISASTER

ARMORE, Okla., Sept. 28.—Additional bodies discovered in the wreckage of the two city blocks devastated by yesterday's gasoline explosion and fire today brought the total known dead up to forty-five. A dozen others were missing, and it was estimated the death toll would be between fifty-five and sixty.

Estimates of property damage ran as high as $1,000,000 today.

Workers reported early today that they could see five more bodies deep in the wreckage of the Madison & Co. department store.

A spark from a workman's hammer set off the blast that wrecked nearly one block of business buildings and started a fire that destroyed another block before it was checked. More than 200 persons were injured.

Horn Case Goes to U. S. Circuit Court

Attorney Joseph P. O'Connell has filed an appeal in behalf of Lieutenant Warner Horn, the alleged German army officer, arrested last February in connection with the attempt to blow up the international bridge at Vancouver, Me.

The appeal is from the decision of Judge Morton, denying a writ of habeas corpus for the release of the man who is now in East Cambridge jail. The filing of the appeal will take the case before the United States Court of Appeals within a month.

Ad Wolgast Loses to Waugh on Foul

"Bobby" Waugh, the Port Worth lightweight, was given the decision on a foul in the sixth round of a scheduled fifteen-round bout over Ad Wolgast, the former champion. The question of a foul was decided by a physician who was called into the ring when Waugh fell to the floor and set up his claim.

WHY BUY ORDINARY BEER?

We have no monopoly on Choice Malt and Saazer Kreis Bohemian Hops, they are in the market and may be bought by any brewer who is willing to pay the price, that his customers may have the best.

The truth is, however, that we are the only brewers in New England buying and using them and brewing pure beer, without maize, glucose or other substitutes, and the growth of our output is clear proof that the public still puts its faith in quality.

FENWAY

ALE, PORTER AND LAGER

THE BEER WITHOUT A SUBSTITUTE
Is brewed for those who drink beer for nourishment as well as for pleasure. Its selected materials undergo the most rigid scientific tests before they are accepted. Its brewing is under the direction of a brew master whose talent and skill have been recognized in the great brewing centers of Europe and America for a quarter of a century. It is brewed right and stays right.

Bottled exclusively at the brewery in CLEAN BOTTLERS. On sale at leading bars and bottle stores.

If your dealer hasn't Fenway, telephone 143 Rox., reverse the charge and we will give you name of nearest dealer who has.

WORLD'S SERIES GOSSIP

THIS Red Sox will have a big edge in respect to home crowd rooting. Thousands and thousands more can get up a chatter for the home boys at Boston than can be in the immediate vicinity of the Philadelphia bandbox to urge on the crew of Morane.

THIS shadow from the grandstand at Boston may turn an ordinary single into something serious during late points after.

MORANE is a manager who plays one game at a time, the same as most successful pilots. He will quite largely finish with the first World's Series game before he embarks very far on the second.

THORNE who remembers the Luders of last year wouldn't recognize him now. The cap and the uniform of the Morane has picked up wonderfully in speed and stickiness.

EDDIE BARNES is so much of a catcher, as he has proven while Kipper has been out.

CHANCEMAY may do much better in the series than in the regular grind. He has been a hard-lucker over the regular route.

BUT leave it to the Red Sox to come through.

Jack Leary Aiding Walkman. When the Browns hit out for Detroit last night they left Jack Leary behind. He's through for the season and intends ending career home over the Waltham High footballers over the jump. Waltham to Leary's home town.

Battling against lightning and thunder he will cut down his chance on the long Boston field, the short wall at Philadelphia will help him to land his home.

This season Loder is rapidly the keeping right on. He is helped by the fact that the pitcher in the National League has been worse this season than it has been in a long time.

To see how he is likely to be kept right on, I looked over his record against ten National League pitchers who are similar to him in style of Boston, Miller and Pearson. I discovered that his average against these ten was 23.00, rather remarkable difference. The indication is that Loder is not likely to be as formidable in the world's series as one might think from the average.

Neither Hobbs nor Loder has been hitting the left hand bat very well. Studying Hobbs' games against five American League pitchers, including Johnson, Scott and Caldwell, I find his batting average must also be reduced considerably.

The Horrors of War as a Great Poet Sees Them

THE impressive article written by Maurice Maeterlinck which appeared in the Hearst newspapers on September 24 contains a sombre and powerful statement of the immense loss which this war has inflicted, and is daily inflicting, upon the civilization of the white race.

You who read Maeterlinck's words must have been deeply impressed by the sombre melancholy with which this great poet and playwright looks upon the dreadful tragedy which is being played beneath his eyes—not upon the mimic stage which he has adorned and enriched with the fruits of his genius and labor, but upon the huge stage of this living world.

Those of you who are acquainted with Maeterlinck's work know that he is as much mystic as poet. His imagination hurls his intellect into the realm of ghosts and shadows. Hence it is natural that he should seek to find consolation in the hope that all this brutality will eventually in mankind's spiritual gain. But at most this is purely speculation and hypothesis.

What alone is certain are the facts—the ghastly, sombre, tragic facts. And these the Belgian writer has set in array, with the force and pathos which so highly distinguish his genius.

To begin with, Maeterlinck says:

"When one sees the frightful loss of so many young lives as the war has caused, when one sees so much physical and moral energy, so much intelligence, such magnificent promises for the future, stricken down at their very source, one verges on despair. Never before have such fine embodiments of energy and hope been cut off so suddenly, one after the other, necessarily, into a nothingness whence comes no grateful response. Since its existence humanity has never in this way squandered its treasures, its substance and its future."

One perceives, not France, not Belgium, not Poland, not in detail nor in fragments, but as a frightful whole, and with a few strokes of his brush paints the dreadful picture of havoc and destruction that we, too, may see it as he sees it.

One perceives, not France, not Belgium, not Poland, not Galicia, wasted with fire and steel, but all Europe devastated of its industries, of its art, of its youth, of its manhood and of its womanhood.

It is as though the dreadful Eumenides of the ancient faiths had again come in furious triumph to exult above the ruin of the race and the peoples which overthrew their altars.

Into the hoppers of this huge mill of murder Maeterlinck shows us war feeding Europe's treasures of art, Europe's achievements of genius, Europe's accumulations of skill and skill, and alas! Europe's youth and strength and beauty and promise.

All these vast and wonderful creations and accumulations of centuries of human aspiration and endeavor and hope are being flung into the melting pot of nothingness.

All that is magnificent and splendid and lovely and of good report is being smitten with steel, burned with fire, trodden in pulp, defiled and made shameful and loathsome and frightful to behold.

Neither the works of men's hands nor the immaterial and loftier creations of virtue and wisdom are spared in this carnival of manias.

Observe, too, the profoundly sad truth which could not escape the eyes of a thinker such as Maeterlinck is—the truth that it is the best and the most useful being first destroyed, the feeblest and the most useless being preserved.

An effect which our civilization will feel and suffer from for generations to come is this survival of the unfit, this reversal of the fundamental law of the universe.

The decree which the Creator himself has written into the very fabric and framework of the world is that progress comes only through the natural and divinely ordained survival of the fittest. And, as Maeterlinck observes, this decree of the Divine Government, this basic law of the whole creation, is being overthrown, defiled, set at naught by the slaughter and waste in the hospitals, the trenches and the battlefields and sieges of this frightful and incredible war.

No wonder that Maeterlinck says:

"People are anxiously asking what the world will be like after the great war? what will remain and what will become of a decimated humanity which has lost its loftiest and best?"

That question answers itself. If humanity is decimated, it will be decimated.

If humanity loses its loftiest and best, it will be without its loftiest and best.

The world will be saddened and civilization will be prostrated for generations and, it may be, for centuries to come if this insane war is prolonged.

Even now literature is degraded to furious shrieks

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR.

IT'S A SAD STORY, MATES

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service of hate and opprobrium, art lends its panting aid to reviling abuse, religion screams rancor instead of love from its pulpits, and the priests and ministers of the compassionate and gentle Nazarene clamorously urge on the hideous rout of death and destruction.

A greater poet than Maeterlinck, writing nearly two centuries ago, pictured the wreck he imagined, might occur to civilization in lines which seem today as though written to describe this obscene and horrid tumult of savagery and slaughter in Europe:

She comes! She comes! The sable throne behold:
Of night primal and of chaos old
Thus at her feet approach and secret might Art after art goes out and all is night.
See shuddering Truth to her old cavern fled:
Mountains of casuality heaped o'er her head!
Philosophy that leaned on Heaven before
Shrinks to her second cause and is no more.
Religion, blushing, veils her sacred fires
And, unaware, morality expires.
Nor public flame nor private darts to shine,
Nor human spark is left, nor glimpse divine.
Lo, this dread empire, Chaos, is restored!
Light dies before thy uncreating word.
Tay hand, great Anarch, lets the curtain fall
And universal darkness buries all!

That is a dreadful picture, drawn from the sombre and tragic imagination which is the hallmark of Alexander Pope's mighty and deathless genius.

And yet, if this awful tragedy in Europe does not soon cease to hold the bloodstained stage, it may well happen that this loftiest light of the poet's imagination will but feebly describe the actualities of the ruin and devastation which shall have fallen upon the civilization of Christendom.

In the presence of the tragedy which exists and the tragedies which so terribly threaten, how mean, how feeble, how base and how abhorrent, Americans, are the appeals and excuses and the arguments with which you are urged to lend your active aid to prolong and to make more wicked and more murderous and more destructive this frightfully wicked and murderous and destructive war.

Countrymen, to provide the means of prolonging this war is no fit part for a brave and generous civilized people to play.

It is no fit part of ours to furnish the weapons of murder, or the money with which to buy the weapons of murder, to these homicidal maniacs. Our prosperity and the prosperity of the world are inseparable.

If we assist in the ruin and destruction of Europe's prosperity and civilization we are actually assisting in the ruin and destruction of our own prosperity and civilization.

Our profit lies in Europe's peace.

Our safety is bound up in Europe's safety.

Our high and solemn duty, before God and man, is to do nothing to prolong this war, to do everything we can do to shorten this war.

If we must make weapons of war, let us make them for our own future defense.

If we have millions of money to loan, let us lend these millions to the encouragement and the upbuilding of peaceful industries at home.

Above all things else, let us keep our national conscience free of offence to God, or to man, and our national hands unstained by the blood of Europe's slaughtered peoples.

So shall we merit the approval of God and so be able confidently to invoke the verdict of history and the judgment of the ages to come.

Flashes on the Screen

WHAT'S THE USE?
HIS food is chosen with much care.
They have a tutor to attend him;
A guard is near him everywhere
With orders always to defend him.
If he should cough or sneeze or sigh
A doctor would be summoned quickly.
They seem to fear that he will die.
Though he is very far from sickly.

THEY sterilize his clothes and pay
To keep him out of every danger;
They never let him, night or day,
Be seated close to any stranger.
HIS name is Roginald, but all
The horrid youngsters call him Fatty.
And in his belly, which is small,
He seems to be a trifle batty.
No matter what the condition of his conscience may be, the dentist is always ready to look his friends in the face.

Good deeds are often wasted by being delayed until the necessity for them is past.

Wall Street Values Its Conscience at 1-2 of One Per Cent

The country now has a measure of the patriotism and humanity of Wall Street. Appeal has been made to Wall Street by the peace-loving and God-fearing elements of our population not to lend the money of the American people to prolong directly or indirectly the war which is murdering the people of Europe.

Wall Street has responded to this humanitarian appeal. The Wall Street promoters of the European war loan have told the English and French commissioners that they are unwilling to murder the manhood of Europe, to make widows of the women, orphans of the children and mourners of the mothers for 5 per cent.

BUT THEY WILL DO IT FOR 5½ PER CENT.
They have said they would not be responsible for the protraction of this wicked war, the further destruction of inestimable treasures in Europe, the inevitable and possibly disastrous complications in our own financial and political and diplomatic situation here in America, for 5 per cent.

BUT THEY WILL FOR ONE-HALF OF 1 PER CENT.
They have stately declared that they will not repudiate America's high political principles, and abandon America's lofty humanitarian ideals, and imperil America's material progress and prosperity, for anything less than that additional ONE-HALF OF 1 PER CENT.

The measure of the conscience, the humanity and the patriotism of Wall Street is now clearly defined and mathematically expressed. IT IS JUST EXACTLY ONE-HALF OF 1 PER CENT.
The probabilities now are that the loan will be made, the additional pound of flesh, or half-pound of flesh, having been guaranteed, but the punishment for America's evil participation in Europe's wicked war will duly and deservedly come through the revolution and repudiation which are very likely to follow this war.

The first rumblings of revolution are already discernible in Russia, and discontent among the working classes is beginning to spread to a considerable extent in Great Britain.
If the war is sufficiently prolonged there will undoubtedly be revolution and probably red anarchy in most of the nations involved in the war.

In the wake of revolution will follow repudiation of public obligations, or depreciation so great that it will amount to repudiation.

If any reader, accustomed to the security of peace, imagines that such depreciation is impossible, let him recall the fact that in French revolutionary times assignats depreciated to less than 3 per cent of their value, and assignats, too, were better than treasury notes, for they at least had the value of the land behind them.

Perhaps even FIVE AND ONE-HALF per cent. interest is insufficient inducement for a loan which in the eventualities of war and revolution may become worth less than three cents on the dollar.

If any reader, accustomed to the sound and stable government of this country, believes that revolution is not now possible in any European state, let him ask himself frankly how long he believes the strong-bodied, stern-minded, plain people of Europe are going to endure the immeasurable misery of this unnatural war, into the hellish depths of which they have been precipitated by the vanities and inhumanities, the enmities and jealousies, of their arrogant and ambitious rulers.

Revolutions are not respectful of royalty, nor of constituted authority, nor of the established order. Revolutions are not regardless of the financial obligations of a deposed and discarded system. Revolutions exhibit no such soft and suave consideration for money and the money power as calm and conservative governments do.

The heads of plutocrats and aristocrats dropped side by side into the baskets on the Place de la Concorde from the imperial edge of the revolutionary guillotine. And so it may be that the tongues of the European statesmen and financiers, which so glibly guaranteed the loan, may fall mute in mouths eternally silent. The day of repayment arrives.

To evade their humanitarian obligations, and avoid their heavy and harrowing responsibilities, the loan promoters of Wall Street say that the particular marked dollars of this loan shall not be used for the purchase of arms and munitions. Such a statement, however, is insincere and inconclusive.

We are increasing the financial resources of the countries to which we make this loan by the exact amount of the loan, and their additional financial resources enable them to buy additional arms and ammunition.

The retention of this loan in one particular place for one apparent purpose is merely a bit of financial legerdemain, a little trick to deceive the conscience of the audience, a ruse so that the financial benefit may not be seen to pass from the hand of the Wall Street prestidigitator into the pocket of the foreign confederate.

The warring European nations, if they are to continue the war, need must buy and will buy, either with our money or with their money, both food supplies and war materials.

We say to these warring nations: "We will buy you the food so that you can spend all your money for war materials."
If we did not lend them money to buy food they would have to spend their own money to buy food, for it is even more important to eat than it is to fight.

If they should spend their money for food they would not have so much for war supplies.

So in the end it amounts to our buying war supplies for these warring nations, because our loan, although claimed to be primarily for food, enables them to buy their war supplies undisturbed and undisturbed by the food situation.

The people of the United States should be glad, and will be glad, to lend the European nations money for food when the loan cannot possibly be used for any other purpose, and when it cannot possibly lend directly or indirectly to the prolongation of the war and the increased purchase of war supplies.

Let those of our bankers who are truly patriotic and genuinely humanitarian say to the European commissioners: "Yes, we will lend you nations of Europe the money you need, and we will lend it at a just and proper rate of interest, the day that peace is concluded, but not a dollar will we lend until peace is concluded."

That policy would ensure peace.

A loan on any other terms, or under any other conditions, no matter how the issue is confused or clouded, is merely a loan to enable the warring nations to protract the horror and misery of the war.

If the policy of our American people is honestly and sincerely in support of peace then let us compel peace.

The power is in our hands.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.
